“ I have been thinking back to when Jackie and I were young. So many memories. One time when we were at Grandma Super's house and the grownups wanted to play cards and talk we were told to go outside and amuse ourselves. We did. After swimming in our clothes we were on our way back and decided to take a short cut across a farmer's field. We didn't know about electric fences. We sure did after that day! We flew 10 feet and our arms hurt for two days. Another time we crawled out a upstairs window onto the porch roof. There we sat singing our heads off. Everything was fine until Jackie started sliding down the roof. She would of fallen off but she snagged her pants on a nail. It was my job to go back though the window, not get caught by Grandma, get the ladder from behind the barn, climb up to the roof and help Jackie get out of her pants with out either of us falling. We climbed down the ladder and there stood Grandma. She looked at us. We thought, "our goose was cooked." Then she started to laugh and laugh. We all laughed until our sides ached. Till Jackie and I had to run for the outhouse. She yelled I get to use the funny pages. That's how I want to remember her, looking back over her shoulder, hair flying, eyes bright, smiling at me. Good bye cousin. Good bye old friend.
