“ There are so many memories that I could share. When she worked at coborns me bought some was strips. They work very good. After she did her eyebrows it looked like she had a black eye. She went to work and told everyone that I gave her a black eye. I remember a time she had called me asking how to spell I. I asked like your eyes or the letter I. She said yeah the letter I. All I could say is I. She felt dumb. Or the time she called the cops on a balloon, or she called the cops on a piece of siding that was hitting her house, thinking somebody was trying to break in. I remember the time she made mashed potatoes and the results of the dogs wouldn't even eat them. One year for thanksgiving everything was just about done and she forgot to turn on the turkey. A lot of her baking and cooking screw ups did turn out pretty good. Like her little smokies and her pulled pork. She ran out of baby rays bbq sauce so she added some sweet and tangy stuff. I can't even count how many times she's helped me out because I forgot about a bill. She's helped me out so much in my life now it's my turn by taking care of Randy. I never in my life thought cancer would take her. I thought she would leave do to old age. Like I said there are so many stupid stuff she did that I could share. She was somethin.
