Aazhoogizhigookwe, Shelley Pindegayosh was born on January 16, 1957, in Minneapolis, Minnesota, to Michael Pindegayosh and Theresa Shingobe. She liked to spend her time with her family, being outdoors, where she would take her grandchildren and great-grandchildren to the area parks. Shelley enjoyed watching her paranormal shows and movies. She loved to cook and eat especially her homemade Chinese food. Shelley will forever be remembered by her family for her spicy attitude and strong willpower.

She is survived by her children, Dale Mann Pindegayosh Sr., Twilia Pindegayosh; brother, Alan Pindegayosh; sisters, Patricia Pindegayosh, Alise Aune, Mary Gerke; and many grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

She was preceded in death by her parents, Michael Pindegayosh and Theresa Shingobe; brother, Dale John Pindegayosh; and her nephew, Michael Thomas Pindegayosh.

“ Shelley and I went to school together when we were in early elementary school. There were three of us who hung out together; Shelley, Mary Walton, and me. Shelley was so smart. That’s what I remember about her. Her mom and my mom went to boarding school together. I’m not sure if it was Whapeton, Flandreau, or Pipestone. My mom just told me they went to school together. Way back when we were kids we were neighbors. I haven’t seen her in decades, but I will always remember her. I hope her passing was a peaceful one. She has joined all the others who have walked on. My condolences to her family. Fly high, Shelley!
