“ I remember when my mom first met him, it wasn't an easy ride for the two of them in the beginning, trying to bring together two different families and to get to the point of being able to get along with one another. Well with the love and kindness they gave to each other made it easier as time went on. They gave it their all in hopes that all their children would accept things and get along with each other, some of us did and some didn't just like any other family I would imagine. The older I got the more I appreciated him and the happiness he brought to our family. He was the rock, the one we could always count on no matter what. He taught me so much about what truly mattered in life. And how easy it was to have a loving relationship when shared with the right person. Not to settle for anything less than what you want. He showed us all how a MAN should treat his WOMAN!!!! He showed us how to show and give respect to those who have earned that from you. Most importantly he taught us how to love and accept each other. Love each other and don't be afraid to show it. Accept each other for who they are, we are all made up of good qualities and bad qualities that's what makes us individuals. I will miss you dearly Dad and Thank You for being the Dad and Grampa you were!!!
